

ABSTRACT

A biometric based system with advanced security and privacy characteristics for the verification of a person's identity using embedded neural net structures and associated weights that process input and output data in parallel and require no central processing unit or microcontroller; resulting in low power dissipation, low cost processing chip, and affordable verification solution for portable uses such as financial transaction cards, identification cards, computers, wireless devices, keyless wireless entry systems, and others.